Part of a doctoral dissertation (SP 001 650), this directory lists 212 institutions with laboratory schools ("a school which is under the administrative control of a collegiate level institution and/or receives the major share of its financial support from such a parent institution") plus 13 institutions which reported the existence of laboratory schools but, according to information provided, neither control nor financially support them. Where available, the following information, obtained through a questionnaire, is provided for each school: the name and location of the parent college or university, the nature of the control of the parent institution, the name of the school, the name of the chief administrator of the school or the respondent to the questionnaire, functions of the school (observation, demonstration, student teaching, research, participation, experimentation, or inservice training), grades included in the school, date of construction of the school, whether tuition is charged, numbers of full- and part-time faculty members, and dates when schools or grades were discontinued. The American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education

The American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education, an autonomous department of the National Education Association, is a national, voluntary association of colleges and universities organized to improve the quality of institutional programs of teacher education. All types of four-year institutions for higher education are represented in the present membership. These include private and church-related liberal arts colleges, state teachers colleges, state colleges, state universities, private and church-related universities, and municipal universities. The teacher education programs offered by the member institutions are varied. Only one uniform theme dominates the AACTE -- the devotion to ever-improving quality in the education of teachers.

Preface

Information regarding laboratory schools - their location, their organization and administration, their faculty and students, their purposes and programs - continues to be of interest to many persons engaged in teacher education. Obviously, data regarding these schools are of special interest to persons directly involved in the work of laboratory schools or in their sponsoring colleges and universities. At the same time, such information is also sought by persons in teacher education who are responsible for meeting the growing problems associated with programs for student teaching and related laboratory experiences for prospective teachers. The problem of achieving an integration of the theoretical and practical in teacher education remains a difficult one and the laboratory school as one means of providing for integrating experiences is of continuing interest to many teacher educators.

For these reasons the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education is making available this directory of laboratory schools currently in operation in the United States.

The data for this directory were collected by Evan Hugh Kelley in the course of his doctoral study at Indiana University. The Committee on Studies of the Association is pleased to have had a small part in encouraging and facilitating Mr. Kelley's survey of college-controlled laboratory schools and expresses its appreciation to him for making the data available to the Association for publication and distribution. The cooperation of the many college and university officials who provided the original data is gratefully acknowledged.

Edward C. Pomeroy
Executive Secretary

Brief Overview of the Findings

The following data refer only to the 212 institutions which have "college-controlled laboratory schools."

Nature of Controlling Institutions

AACTE Member Institution	201
Non-Member Institution	11
Public Institution	178
Non-Public Institution	34

Of the public institutions, 141 (79% of 178), are, or originally were, normal schools, teachers colleges, or normal, industrial and agricultural institutes. Thirty-three (19% of 178) are state universities and/or land grant colleges.

Geographic Distribution of Laboratory Schools

New York (16); Pennsylvania (15); Wisconsin (11); Illinois (9); Alabama, Kentucky, Maryland and Minnesota (8 each); and Louisiana and Massachusetts (7 each) account for 97 (46%) of the nation's college-controlled laboratory schools. California, Connecticut, Michigan, Missouri, Nebraska, and Ohio (6 each) account for an additional 17 percent of the total.

Alaska, Delaware, Nevada, South Dakota and Vermont have no college-controlled laboratory schools.

Functions of Laboratory Schools

Respondents from 186 institutions provided information regarding the relative importance of the seven possible laboratory school functions listed on the survey questionnaire. For the total group the functions were ranked in the following order of importance:

First	- Observation
Second	- Demonstration
Third	- Student Teaching
Fourth	- Participation
Fifth	- Experimentation
Sixth	- Research
Seventh	- In-Service Training

In spite of the attention which has been given to the importance of research and experimentation as unique functions of laboratory schools,* only twenty-seven (27) institutions listed either of these two functions as of first importance in their schools. On the other hand, sixty-two (62) institutions reported that student teaching is the most important teacher education function of their laboratory school.

* Association for Student Teaching, The Purposes, Functions and Uniqueness of the College-Controlled Laboratory School. Bulletin No. 9, 1958.

Explanation of Symbols and Data

A college-controlled laboratory school as defined in this survey is a school which is under the administrative control of a collegiate level institution and/or receives the major share of its financial support from such a parent institution. This directory lists 212 institutions whose laboratory schools appear to meet these qualifications. In addition it lists 13 institutions which reported the existence of laboratory schools, but which, according to the information received, neither control nor provide the major financial support for these schools. These schools are marked with an asterisk (*) in the list.

In order to provide some evidence of the changing situation with respect to "laboratory schools," institutions which have reported the discontinuance of all or parts of such schools are listed together with the date of closing reported.

The following information is indicated for each school where available:

- A. The name and location of the parent college or university
- B. Nature of control of parent institution: Public institutions are unmarked; non-public institutions are marked (Pr)
- C. The name of the school
- D. The name of the chief administrator of the school or the respondent to the questionnaire
- E. Functions of the school: Numbers listed under the school indicate the relative importance assigned to each of the following functions by the respondent:
 - 1. Observation
 - 2. Demonstration
 - 3. Student Teaching
 - 4. Research
 - 5. Participation
 - 6. Experimentation
 - 7. In-service training and preparation of teachers, supervisory and administrative personnel, and special services personnel as a service to the profession.

For example: At the Kilby School of Florence State College in Florence, Alabama, according to William A. Graham, Director, the observation function ranks second (2), the demonstration function ranks third (3), the student teaching function ranks first (1), the research function ranks seventh (7), etc.

- F. Vertical organization: Indicates grades included in the school. N = nursery school, K = kindergarten.
- G. Date of construction: Indicates date current school building was constructed.
- H. Tuition: If tuition is charged, this column contains a "T."
- I. Faculty: Reports numbers of full-time and part-time faculty members.
- J. School or grades discontinued: Indicates dates when school or grades were discontinued.

More detailed information regarding the schools included in the survey will be available in Kelley's completed dissertation.
